

Press Release of 7th August 2003

Intergral as a partner of amenotec's at the DMS (Digital Management Solutions) show in Essen from 16th to 18th September 2003, hall 3, stall 3670

Intergral presents web-based information portal "Tornado Business Center"

Essen. At the DMS, Intergral Information Solutions GmbH presents its range of services surrounding Tornado Business Center™. Tornado combines and organises information on the basis of a business data model to provide individuals, workgroups and business partners with relevant information via the web. Intergral presents a reference installation for sales and marketing based on this technology that is in world-wide use by Philips Medical Systems.

Tornado uses what is referred to as "Business Knowledge Channels" on the basis of a freely definable business data model. These make for the personalisation of intranet, internet and extranet environments and ensure business process relevant information is available to the staff that needs to deal with it and, moreover, to business partners. Amenotec technology is employed to automate assignment of documents to channels in terms of associative links. This extension is a particularly desirable thing to have when Tornado is deployed for the first time in a company, as it frees the user of the burden of having to assign the whole lot of existing documents manually. Instead, amenotec makes for their automatic classification; meaning customers can cut down on costs and speed up their projects.

At amenotec's DMS stand, Intergral presents a reference installation for sales and marketing of the kind that is in world-wide use by Philips Medical Systems. This delivers what product information is relevant to them to staff, distribution partners, vendors and business customers.

About amenotec GmbH:

Bocholt-based Amenotec GmbH is a developer and provider of innovative knowledge management technologies. The company employs 25 people. Its CEOs are Wolfgang Aigner, Ivo Leunig and Dr. Klaus Holthausen. Their range of products includes IT solutions for search engines, pattern recognition and data classification.

The technology developed by Dr. Holthausen maps unstructured digital information into an associative organisation to expand usability and to make for more efficient data management. Its interfacing allows for quick and easy integration of the technology with existing information and knowledge environments. It thus provides an easy way to add value to other document and content management systems.
